WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA AND CENTRAL COASTAL AREAS:

Eureka Weather:

High pressure will continue to bring dry conditions and seasonable temperatures to northwest California today. Expect low clouds and fog along the coast during the night and morning with partial clearing in the afternoon. A trough moving toward the West Coast early this week will bring cooler temperatures and widespread rain by the middle of the week.

San Francisco Weather:

Two more days of near normal temperatures and coastal low clouds are in store for the forecast area. A Pacific storm system will bring rain to the region by midweek.

CENTRAL CALIFORNIA AND SOUTHERN SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY

Sacramento Weather:

The forecast area will have dry and warmer temperatures early this week, and then cooler and wetter weather is expected for the middle to end of the week.

Hanford Weather:

A weak upper ridge will return with dry conditions and warmer temperatures early this week. However, a change in the weather may occur late in the week as a Pacific storm enters the region with cooling and possible precipitation.

WEATHER

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA:

Los Angeles Weather:

Building high pressure will bring a warming trend and a decrease in night through morning marine layer cloud coverage through midweek. A trough of low pressure will then bring cooler weather and an increase in night through morning low clouds and fog for late in the week. Offshore flow and a warming trend are possible by next Sunday.

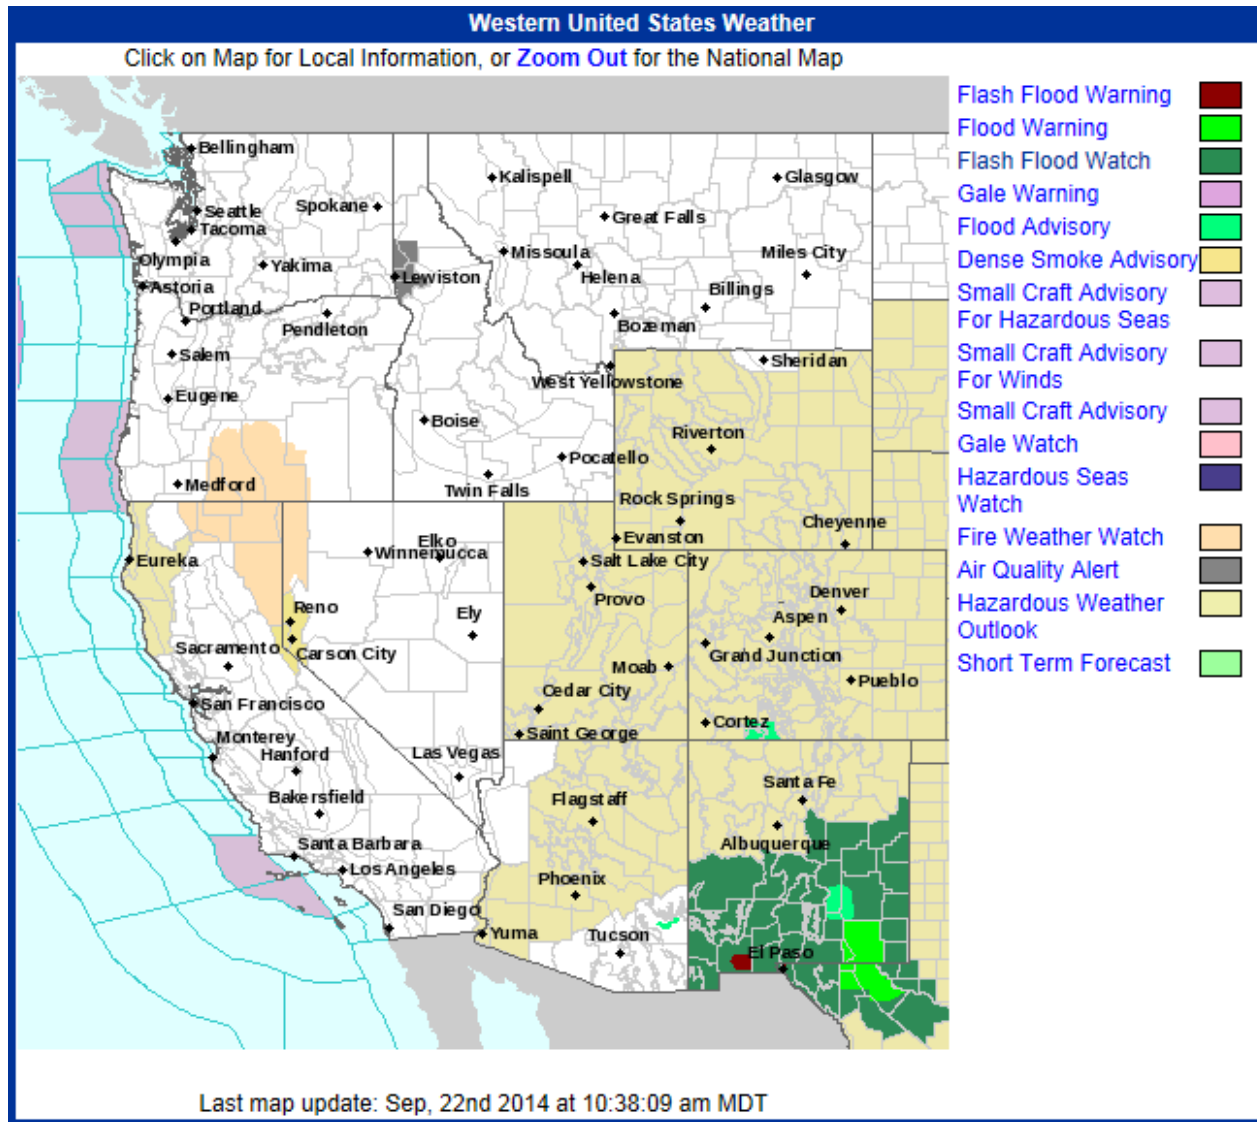

Extreme Southwestern California Including Orange, San Diego, Western Riverside and Southwestern San Bernardino Counties:

A building ridge of high pressure will induce a warming trend through midweek with inland temperatures rising 5-10 degrees above average by Wednesday. The inland extent of night and morning low clouds will also shrink to start the week, and then become confined to the immediate coast by Wednesday morning. A deepening trough of low pressure along the West Coast by Friday will bring much cooler but still dry weather. Strong winds will be possible in the mountains and deserts from Friday into the weekend.

Southeast California Weather:

Temperatures in the forecast area will trend upward a few degrees by Wednesday. An approaching Pacific weather system likely affecting the Desert Southwest on Friday through Sunday will lead to a return of storm chances along with cooler temperatures.
